

John Hanibal Carlen Barn

The earliest owner of the property on which this barn stands, that we could determine, was John Hanibal Carlen (pronounced Carleen). It is located on 3219 So Daniel Road in Daniel, Utah. He helped his Pioneer (of 1869), Swedish father on his farm, until he was able to buy this farm. John H raised Jersey cows here and was a very good carpenter. John' wife was Lenora Bell Carlen.

It is surmised: from the need to have shelter for his herd, and because he was handy with the carpenter tools, that he must have built this barn. It has an unusual face, with diagonally-placed pine siding, and has a gambrel roof---unusual for the time. The south portion, has feeding and milking stalls with mangers and a loft for hay storage.

It is known, that the daughter of John Hanibal and Lenora Bell Carlen; Zella Carlen Stanley (wife of Cecil Stanley) was the next owner of the barn and property. They also had a dairy operation. From here, it passed to the Gloria Schaugaard Family, and then to Lloyd and Anita Popp, the present owners, in 1972.

Moroni Winterton Barn

This Charleston barn is located at 2830 W 2400 So. and was built by Elisha Webster, of the same community. It is constructed of native red pine and finished in 1915. Moroni and his wife, Susie Mabel Giles Winterton's yellow brick home had been finished in 1912, which is also on this property.

It has been used for hay storage, farm animals and implement storage, through the years, by the original and subsequent owners. These owners were in turn: Moroni Winterton, Heber W. Winterton obtained it in about 1923, then a Dr Green, from Salt Lake City, invested in it. Later, Joseph and Earl Collard owned it and ran sheep on this farm. Even later, Gilbert Olsen ran a dairy operation there. Then Sharon J Winterton bought it. Now, Kent Winterton owns it. The barn is still strong, upright and useable, after these 83 years. I wish, of the rest of us, at this age, the same could be said.
